Summary of Presentation

Development is a measure of social life. Human being have devoted a long time to developing, accelerating and sustaining the development of their society, and have formulated and explained the problems of development in many ways, and developed various theories and concepts of development. Various measures have been planned and taken to implement in real life, and they are still achieving certain results.

One of them is the Sustainable Development Goals with 17 goals, 169 targets and 244 indicators adopted by the UN General Assembly's Sustainable Development Summit in September 2015. The program should be implemented and achieved by 2030. Therefore, each country, that joined the program is gradually implementing the goals and objectives of the program in accordance with its national development planning process, policies and strategies.

Mongolia is implementing the goals and trends of global development in accordance with its national characteristics. In doing so, development policies are developed and implemented by leading government institutions. "Vision-2050" approved by the State Great Hural in 2020, and "New Revival Policy" in 2021 - Mongolia's long and mid-term policy documents are duly included.

Mongolia is implementing national programs and movements to meet the goals and objectives of sustainable development. For instance, the President of Mongolia has initiated three pillar, interrelated national campaigns called "One billion trees", "Food Revolution" and "Healthy Mongolian People" to implement the country's development policy and implement them as a comprehensive activity.

These campaigns, based on the principle of creating future resources and opportunities through today's development, are aimed at ensuring the implementation of the goals and objectives of sustainable development of the world proposed by the United Nations and the long and mid-term development policies of Mongolia.
